

The Federal Communications Commission

Dear The Federal Communications Commission,

The Bush people are continuing to pursue the crusade of switching the burden of supporting the government from big business, and the rich to the little guy. Taxing cell phone usage is another example. Come on people! Your part of this society. One day you will be just another tax payer. You will be out of the bureaucracy your now a part of administrating. Lets look at the long run. If you start taxing now, when will, it ever stop? And remember you started it when your ten years out of government and complaining about making pennies last. You start with pennies and believe me ten or fifteen years down the road it will be a fin or a saw buck. Stop now!

Sincerely,

Thomas Budzik
